Birdwatching is also a relatively inexpensive hobby. All you need is a pair of binoculars and a field guide to birds. You can find these items at most sporting goods stores or online.

If you're new to birdwatching, it's a good idea to start out by visiting a local park or nature preserve. These areas are usually home to a variety of birds, and you're likely to see some interesting species.

Once you've found a good spot to birdwatch, take some time to sit and observe the birds. Pay attention to their size, shape, and color. You can also listen to their songs and calls.

If you're not sure what kind of bird you're looking at, you can use a field guide to help you identify it. Field guides typically include pictures and descriptions of the different bird species that are found in your area.

Once you've identified a bird, you can learn more about it by reading about it in a field guide or online. You can also track the birds you see in a bird journal. This is a great way to keep track of your progress and learn more about the birds in your area.
